

LEAP NEW CREATOR REQUIREMENTS

Staff briefing — everything you need to know

1. WHAT IS CHANGING

From 1 November, every creator who joins LEAP has 90 days to clear three bars:

rule	the bar	deadline
1	Go LIVE at least once	day 7
2	Go LIVE on 10 separate days	day 30
3	Earn 10,000 diamonds	day 90

Miss one and they come off the roster.

The shortcut

Pass 10,000 diamonds at any point and they are finished early.

The clock stops. NEW CREATOR comes off, CREATOR goes on, and rule 2 stops applying to them entirely. A creator who goes hard in week one never has to think about the day count again.

This matters more than it looks. A 90-day probation is something a creator endures. A 90-day probation they can win in their first week is a race — and nothing else in the rules gives anybody a reason to push early.

Removal is not a ban

Anyone removed can rejoin and start again from day one. Say this out loud in every removal conversation, because it is true and it changes how the conversation goes.

2. THE BOT — WHAT IT NOW DOES FOR YOU

The LEAP bot runs the whole clock. You do not track dates, count days, or remember who is due what.

It handles:

- Assigning NEW CREATOR the moment someone joins, with their 90-day clock
- Watching every creator's LIVE days and diamonds daily
- Sending the countdown messages (all six are in section 3)
- Flipping NEW CREATOR → CREATOR the second someone passes 10,000 diamonds
- Flagging the review band to you instead of removing (section 4)
- Carrying out removals once a deadline passes
- Posting a daily checkpoint list to your channel: who is due what, this week

What feeds it: the monitoring service already tracks every creator's daily LIVE days and diamonds. It publishes a checkpoint feed each morning — one row per creator with a deadline coming, carrying their coach, which rule, what they still need, and a verdict of nudge, review or remove. The bot reads that and acts.

What this means for you: you are not responsible for spotting anybody. If a creator on your roster is in trouble, you will be told. Your job is what you do after you are told.

3. EVERY MESSAGE THE BOT SENDS

Six messages. Each one goes before a deadline, never after. You will see each one in your checkpoint channel as it fires, so you always know what your creators have been told.

Day 1 — welcome (everyone)

Welcome to LEAP. Your 90 days start today.
First one: get LIVE before <DATE>. It doesn't need to be long or polished — an hour counts. Just get the first one out of the way.
Your coach is <COACH>.

Day 5 — only if they have not been LIVE

You've got 2 days to get your first stream in.
An hour is enough. Tonight would do it.
Need a hand setting up? Message <COACH> now, not tomorrow.

Day 25 — only if under 10 LIVE days

You're on <N> of 10 LIVE days with 5 days to go.
You need <10-N> more nights. An hour each counts.
If that's not happening, tell <COACH> today and we'll sort something.

On passing 10,000 diamonds — the good one

That's 10,000 diamonds. You're done — you're a CREATOR now.
No more clock, no more day counting. You proved it faster than most.
Go and tell your room.

Day 80 — only if under 10,000 diamonds

You're on <N> of 10,000 diamonds with 10 days left.
That's <X> a night. Closer than it sounds.
<COACH> can help you plan the last stretch — ask.

Removal

Your 90 days are up and the <RULE> wasn't met, so you're coming off the roster today.
This isn't personal and it isn't permanent. If you want to come back, message <COACH> any time and we'll restart you from day one.
Genuinely — good luck with it.

4. THE REVIEW BAND — THE ONE CALL THAT IS YOURS

The bot does everything automatically except one case.

If a creator reaches their 30-day gate with under 10 LIVE days BUT between 5,000 and 10,000 diamonds, the bot flags them to you instead of removing them. You decide.

Why this exists

One creator. @hjixzzz joined on 20 July. In his first month he managed four LIVE days and 7,911 diamonds — 2,089 short of the shortcut, six days short of rule 2. A straight rule removes him on day 30.

In September he earned 138,011 diamonds.

He is the single most expensive mistake these rules could make, and the shortcut alone does not save him — he was 79% of the way to it. The review band does.

How many, and how to judge it

Across July, August and September, ten creators landed in this band. Call it three a month across the whole network — so roughly one each, every month or two. These are not a workload. They are the only decisions in the entire system that can cost us a real creator, so give them a proper five minutes.

The question is not "did they stream enough." It is:

Are they gifting well on the few nights they do show up?

- Few nights, good diamonds → a schedule problem. Coachable. Keep them, and have the conversation about consistency.

- Many nights, no diamonds → an audience problem. Mostly does not fix itself. That one is a genuine removal.

@hjixzzz was doing roughly 2,000 diamonds a night on the nights he appeared. That is not someone who can't do it. That is someone who wasn't turning up.

5. WHY THESE THREE BARS

We tested the rules against our own data before setting them, not after.

They catch the right people

Had the rules been live, 58 creators would have been removed in September.

the 58 removals

their combined September diamonds	13,587 — 0.05% of the network
their combined October diamonds (first week)	874 — 0.01%
how many streamed at all in October	9 of 58
how many are past 5,000 diamonds since	0 of 58
how many had already quit unasked	9

39 of the 58 did literally nothing all month. No stream, no hour, no diamond.

The 30-day bar predicts who makes it

first 30 days	still streaming 2 months on	earning 10k+ a month
cleared 10 LIVE days in first 30	59-71%	20-32%

first 30 days	still streaming 2 months on	earning 10k+ a month
did not	15-19%	0-2%

Creators who clear the 30-day bar are about four times more likely to still be here two months later and ten times more likely to be earning properly. That is the honest answer when a creator asks why the bar is where it is.

This is not about money

Removing all 58 would have cost us a twentieth of one percent of the network. It is about where your attention goes. Sur3shot is carrying 230 creators. Nobody on earth can coach 230 people, and a large part of that list has never gone LIVE once.

6. YOUR BACKLOG

Creators who joined since July, are still active, and have already missed one of these deadlines.

coach	roster	affected	their Sept diamonds
Sur3shot	118	48	10,812
Cam	81	20	9,349
Bean	42	20	1,487
Unc	31	9	141,888	<- see note
Surge	12	7	1,669
Slow	16	6	238
Muju	29	4	23
Reefman	8	2	14,455
Colesy	3	1	35
Malkin	15	0	0
TOTAL	365	118	179,956

Note on Unc's column: 138,011 of that 141,888 is @hjixzzz, who the review band keeps. Strip him out and the entire affected group across every coach is worth 0.63% of September's diamonds.

This is a backlog, not a monthly load. It clears once.

7. ROLLOUT

when	what
1 Nov	Requirements posted and pinned in the creator server. Membership screening on — every new creator ticks them before they can post. Everyone joining from this date gets NEW CREATOR and starts their clock.
Nov	Grace month for the existing roster. Nobody who joined before 1 Nov is removed. They get the same countdown messages so they know exactly where they stand.
1 Dec	Rules apply to everybody. The backlog in section 6 clears.

Do not remove anyone from the existing roster during November. Announcing a standard and culling in the same week reads as a purge, and that will be the thing people talk about instead of the rules.

8. EXCEPTIONS — PAUSING A CLOCK

Illness, exams, bereavement, a family emergency, a broken setup, a house move. All of it is fine. All of it is pausable.

The one condition: you have to flag it BEFORE their deadline.

We can pause a clock. We cannot un-remove somebody gracefully — the message has gone, the role has changed, and they have already told their mates they got dropped.

If a creator goes quiet on you and you suspect something is up, flag it anyway. A paused clock costs nothing.

9. WHAT THIS MEANS FOR RECRUITMENT

In steady state, expect 70 to 80 removals a month against about 105 signings.

We are not going to be a smaller agency. We are going to be the same size with a roster that actually streams.

But it means the recruitment number that matters stops being signings and starts being signings that clear day 30. Right now that is 31%. If recruiters are still measured on raw signings, they will sign 250 a month to land the same 70 keepers and the rules become paperwork.

10. THE SHORT VERSION

1. Three bars: LIVE in 7 days, 10 LIVE days in 30, 10,000 diamonds in 90.
2. 10,000 diamonds at any point ends it early — clock stops, role flips.
3. The bot does all of it. Roles, messages, flags, removals.
4. You own one decision: under 10 days but 5,000–10,000 diamonds. Judge it on gift rate, not nights. About one a month each.
5. Flag anyone with a reason before their deadline.
6. New joiners from 1 Nov. Existing roster from 1 Dec.

Questions in the coach channel, not DMs, so everybody sees the answer.
